Our talk studies the question of the distinction between variation and change in a situation of language contact, namely contact between Catalan and Spanish on Majorca. We study the variation between the use of two verbal periphrases present in both languages, haber de ‘have of’ and tener que ‘have that’ + infinitive. These periphrases can be used to express deontic (1) or epistemic (2) readings.

- (1) a. y tenía que volver a su sitio
‘and he had to return to his place’
- b. y esto lo hemos de defender
‘and we need to defend this’
- (2) a. en aquella época también tenía que ser un poco distinto de ahora
‘at that time it must have also been a bit different than today’
- b. sí ha de llover mucho
‘yes, it must be raining a lot’

Previous studies have found that in comparison to tener que, Spanish haber de is more likely to express epistemic readings (e.g., Garachana Camarero & Hernández Díaz 2020). In contrast, Catalan haver de frequently expresses deontic readings (Blas Arroyo 2016). We maintain that due to contact with Catalan, the opposition between haber de and tener que in Balearic Spanish is governed to a lesser degree by preferences in terms of modal meanings than in Mainland Spanish. This claim is substantiated by a quantitative analysis of over $n = 5,900$ occurrences of these periphrases in these varieties, taken from corpora of sociolinguistic interviews in Mainland Spanish, the Spanish spoken in Palma de Mallorca, and rural varieties of Spanish spoken by elderly Majorcans.
