
Das geht nicht zu ändern: the origin and structure of the German go to+V modal passive

We investigate a case of creative innovation straddling economy and expressivity involving a sparsely documented passive construction in colloquial German whereby gehen ‘to go’ combines with a zu-infinitive.

- (1) Was einmal geschehen, das geht nicht zu ändern.
What once happened that goes not to change
‘What happened once cannot be changed.’
(Deutsches Sprichwörter-Lexikon. Bd. 1, 1867, S. 1585; DWDS corpus)

The construction resembles other modal passives, e.g. deontic sein+zu ‘be to’ (Demske-Neumann 1994, Eroms 2006, Holl 2010), since (i) it expresses modality (i.e., (im)possibility), and (ii) the infinitive’s object is promoted to subject. Yet the go-to-passive differs from other modal passives in its meaning and grammatical and lexical-semantic restrictions. Explicitly, the go-to passive expresses only (im)possibility and is facilitated by negation (or adverbials akin to middles) (2a); speaker consultation and corpus analysis also reveal a lexical restriction for transitive verbs expressing accomplishments (a result state/change of state involving a durative event, Vendler 1957) e.g. abwischen ‘to wipe (off)’, (ver)ändern ‘to change’, öffnen ‘to open’, (ver)schließen ‘to close’, while transitive change-of-state achievement verbs such as töten ‘to kill’ or befördern ‘to promote’ are incompatible but occur in other modal passives (2b).

- (2) a. Die Tafel geht ??(nicht/einfach) abzuwischen.
the board goes (not/simple) off-to-wipe
b. *Dieser Angestellter ist/geht nicht zu befördern.
This employee is/ goes not to promote

We argue that the go-to-passive emerged by analogy with preexisting strategies involving gehen expressing impossibility (Das geht nicht ‘That isn’t possible’), especially with resultative particles (Das geht nicht ab ‘It doesn’t come off’). The combination with zu-infinitives was also likely facilitated by an older construction involving ‘go’ and a zu-infinitive to express future events (Demske 2020).
